Description:	A five-day intensive workshop in "Administration of an International Development Programme" was held in Singapore December 3 - 7, 2001. Delivered by a three-person team from Saint Mary's University, Halifax, Canada, this workshop was co-sponsored by the Canadian International Development Agency and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Singapore. Eighteen participants and three observers took part in an intensive professional development exercise to learn about the concepts underlying current development thought and how those concepts can be translated to effective programme and project design, delivery, and monitoring. In addition, they were able to forge professional contacts for future networking.
