

Think learning is just for kids?

Think again.

Dr. Tanya Peckmann, Anthropology (foreground) is one of the dynamic faculty you will find at Saint Mary's University.

IF YOU'VE FOUND YOURSELF CURIOUS about politics or religion, eager to delve into the world of macroeconomics or statistics, or perhaps just keen to read a novel with greater understanding, then Saint Mary's University could provide you with some answers.

During International Learning Week, 3-9 March 2008, we are opening our doors to anyone with an urge to learn. It's a great opportunity to sit in on a class and experience university for yourself—for free. You might be a single mum, working full-time, or just feel that you missed out on university when you were younger. Whatever your background, you will find the professors delighted to welcome you as a guest learner to their classes.

Choose from courses in archeology, atlantic canada studies, english, management and global change, as well as many others. It's best to sign up early, indicating your first and second choices. To book your class or to ask any questions you may have, please contact Continuing Education at 420 5492, or go to conted.smu.ca.

Courses available

FACULTY OF ARTS

Introduction to Archaeology
Introduction to Human Communication
Health and Social Policy in Atlantic Canada
Introduction to Literature
American Fiction 1950 to Present
Media in Everyday Life
The Writer and Nature
Irish Musical Traditions
Critical Thinking
Peoples of Nova Scotia: Identities and Ethnicity
Political Analysis
Religion in Contemporary Culture
Introductory Sociology

FACULTY OF COMMERCE

Principles of Macroeconomics
Introduction to Business Management
Quantitative Methods 2
Introductory Statistics

FACULTY OF SCIENCE

Dinosaurs and Their World
Global Change
Natural Resource Management

Check our website for an up-to-date schedule

We look forward to welcoming you!

Division of Continuing Education

Saint Mary's University
883 Robie Street, Halifax, NS B3H 3C3

902.420.5492
email: conted@smu.ca
conted.smu.ca

One University. One World. Yours.

Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada • www.smu.ca