

How to Find Journal Articles

Use the Journals A-Z link on the Library's homepage to quickly determine whether or not the Library owns a particular journal, and the volumes or years of coverage that are available.

Step 1: Click on the Journals A-Z link on the Library's homepage:

Step 2: This will take you to the Find e-Journal page. Enter the title of the journal, magazine, or newspaper that you are looking for (e.g., Harvard Business Review).

Step 3: If you find the journal you are looking for, click on its title to view availability information. In our example below, you can see that the full text of the Harvard Business Review is available via the Business Source Premier database from 1922 to the present.
